

ABSTRACT

A method for processing requests or commands for writing and reading to and from memory that has not been allocated and reserved for one or more volumes, and a method for establishing one or more volumes, where the one or more volumes define
5 an area of the memory that is accumulatively greater than the actual memory capacity, thus allowing for memory to be added at a later time.